Not originally a member of that Convenion, but called to aid in its deliberations after its session had begun, I wrought with fidelity and carnestness to secure that object which, next to principle, seemed nearest to he hearts of the Democracy of Ohio for the ast six months—the nomination of George H. Pendleton. We failed because of reasons not necessary nor proper now to consider. But in all else, the labors of the Convention ould not have terminated more in accord nce with the wishes and purposes of true patriots and Democrats, or better for the ountry. For President we have nominated dished gentleman, sober and righteons l the enlarged, catholic sense of the term; man of the strictest pecuniary integrity; the candidate of no "ring" or faction, and one who will neither himself steal nor permit theft in others. And this, after the larcen have mocked and dwarfed the gigantic pecdations and corruptions of even Roman of of physical epidemics, every phase and speies of public crime and offense speedily as sumed the form and type of robbery or theft is high, exalted eulogy upon the candidates and gives promise of a return to honest times Nominated, to my personal knowledge against his will, and without a pledge or tion of any sort, other than that which binds licious tongues insinuate, I would that the

The Chicago platform of 1868, exults in the labors and fruits of the last seven years of Republican rule, and promises a continu ance of its blessings, such as they are. The Democratic Platform of 1868, recurring to the fundamental principles of the Government, and proclaiming the ancient and sound policies of the Democratic party, under which, for sixty years, the country prosper ed, flourished was happy and became truly great, denonnces the ideas, the wrongs, the ourdens and the oppressions of the present, Convention, I report to you, my Democratic and demands a change. It buries the dead and goes forth to meet the living present and without rhetoric, the political situation and the quickening future, full of the hope and promise of better times; and rallies to its support, on terms of perfect equality, every element of opposition to the revolution ry doctrines and practices which threaten the overthrow of both the ideal and the actud Government which our fathers established. It begins with the declaration that its trust is in the intelligence, patriotism and disiminating justice of the American people; and however this people may for a time run nto madness and folly, or do, or permit leeds of outrage or injustice, yet, under Providence, no trust is more sure ami steadfast than in the sober, second thought of an ntelligent, civilized and religious people. It recognizes the Constitution as the foundation of the Government and of its powers, bond of Union, and the guaranty of the liberties of the people, and it admits of no founty, and no pretence of public safety justifyacts for partizan purposes, outside of the With full as many signs of deadly hate,

I have now, my Democratic triends finished what I had to say upon the political issues and situation to-day. One word further upon another sublect, and I have done.

You hear from every quarter, thro' the Republican press, the alarm that party to reinaugurate revolution and civil war. Let no man be in the least concerned. Unquestionably it is the serve the Union with all the dignity, equality Democratic voters, with all the intenslaves, if we shall fairly, constitutionelect General Grant. But no man meditates openly or covertly, any revolutionists. It is they who resolvcivil and social war with all its horit should continue ever to remain
